2011 UNESCO media and information literacy as prerequisites in the Networked Society for all citizens but focusing on teachers as leaders in media education.

The framework of five key elements:

- Understand the role and functions of media and information in democratic societies.
- Understand and access media contents and their uses, in terms of consumption.
- Critically evaluate media content in the light of media reliability.
- Engage with media for self-expression and democratic participation.
- Review skills (including ICTs) needed to produce user-generated content

C'mon if they are digital natives they will ace it!

Why did IATEFL Poland lie to me?

Why did they write it was a plenary, workshop, non-commercial session and it wasn't?

Did they do it on purpose (misinformation or disinformation, malinformation?)

"Info Interventions" is a collection of research experiments that help people build information resilience at critical moments in their online journey, so they can protect themselves from a range of online harms, including misinformation, hate speech, and violent extremism. Our designs examine when people might be vulnerable to specific messages—for example, false claims in propaganda or extremist recruiting messages—and how we ...

Young people more likely to believe, spread fake news: Utrecht researchers

Young people aged 15 to 24 are more likely to believe fake news and share it, according to a new media literature study by researchers at Hogeschool Utrecht. They tend to rely on their gut feeling and think they are quite capable of recognizing fake news, researcher Sophie Duvekot told RTL Nieuws.

"Young people are very interested and find it important to stay informed of the news," Duvekot said. It gives them topics to discuss and helps them develop their point of view. "That is important for their identity formation."

In Science We Trust?

*I refuse to put on winter tires because it's my car, my choice, my freedom.
The effectiveness of winter tires is not proven outside of studies conducted by manufacturers (surprising).
My neighbour had an accident after fitting winter tires.
Some people have three sets of winter tires; this proves their ineffectiveness.
We don't know what they are made of.
The giants (tire manufacturers) scare us with winter to get rich.
Besides, it's the manufacturers who invented snow and spread it at night while you sleep.
If I have tires, the government can track me in the snow. Learn, open your eyes, stop being sheep.
This year I say no to winter tires!*
